What is Arquivo.pt?

About 80% of web pages disappear or are changed to a different content, 1 year after their publication.

Arquivo.pt contributes to preserve this valuable information that describes our current times so that it is not lost.

The objective is to provide a research infrastructure that enables the analysis of web information published across time.

How to use?

Arquivo.pt is a public and free service that preserves millions of web pages archived since 1996.

Anyone can search pages from the past that contain given terms or access the version history of a given page.

Give it a try!

How it works?

Arquivo.pt periodically gathers pages from the web and preserves them for future access.

Daily, a set of 300 selected online publications are harvested. Every 3 months, the sites hosted under the .PT domain are saved.

Selected international websites related to research and education are also preserved.

How to collaborate?

Suggest interesting sites to be archived, even if they are hosted outside the .PT domain, so that you never lose them.

Provide us backups of old websites and we will preserve them for you at no cost.

Disseminate Arquivo.pt among your colleagues and friends so that they can benefit from this free public service.
